

the aircraft is cabin is already a small space with many people confined together without anyplace for privacy. the use of cell phones is ill-advised. The flight crews on aircraft are already competing with a variety of technological gadgets for the attention of the passengers. Cell phones are one more item that will make it difficult to get the passengers to focus on instructions which they are being given. It is vital that the FCC heed the warnings of those employees who work in the aircraft cabin. To not do so is blatantly irresponsible. It's necessary to draw the line for what is permissible on an aircraft.
